

Dr. Soyoungh Kwon

Principal Consultant

Assistant Professor of Global Affairs at George Mason University
Korea

Dr. Soyoungh Kwon is Assistant Professor of Global Affairs at George Mason University Korea. She received her PhD and M.Phil in Social and Political Sciences from the University of Cambridge, MA from Stockholm University, and BA in Political Science and Diplomacy from Ewha Women's University.

She taught and conducted her research as a research associate fellow at the East Asia Institute of the University of Cambridge and at the Asia Pacific Research Center of Stanford University, as a Shorenstein fellow. Dr. Kwon served as a Korea specialist and advisor on the EU-Korea relations at the European Parliament (Brussels, Belgium) and IR advisor at an International Sports Organization. Since 2008, she took posts as an adjunct professor at the Graduate School of International Studies of Kyung Hee University, and subsequently as a lecturing professor at the Faculty of International Studies of Chonbuk National University.

Dr. Soyoungh Kwon is currently a research associate fellow at Yonsei Institute for North Korean Studies of Yonsei University and a board member of the International Sports Relations Foundation. Her main areas of interest are comparative politics, international relations, North Korean studies, inter-Korea relations, peace and security in Northeast Asia, and sports for development and peace.